PRIMARY PRACTICES

Litigation

Alexey van Groshev has served in multiple key roles at Hahn Loeser since 2016, providing critical litigation support and legal technology leadership. Alexey leads an internal team of developers responsible for the design, implementation, and continuous optimization of proprietary practice platforms, leveraging machine learning pipelines and large language model (LLM)-based technologies.

Alexey also delivers advanced data analytics in support of commercial litigation, class actions, and employment matters, including analyses of class size, subclassing, and potential damages. This work frequently supports expert declarations and court submissions.

In addition, Alexey manages firmwide eDiscovery initiatives and oversees teams that assist attorneys and clients with the identification, collection, and analysis of electronically stored information across matters and offices.
