Samuel C. Sneed engages in efficient, effective and fervent advocacy on behalf of both individuals and businesses. His business experience includes representing clients in commercial litigation, business torts, labor and employment disputes, real estate litigation, class-action defense, and alternative dispute resolution matters.

In addition to his considerable litigation and trial experience, Sam regularly advises individuals, businesses, officers, directors, agents, independent contractors, and employees in employment matters, contract-based controversies, and pre-litigation dispute resolution.

Sam also routinely represents and advises property owners, businesses, secured lenders, title companies, and escrow companies in connection with property disputes, and has successfully represented clients in quiet title, declaratory relief, fraud, interference, unfair competition, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, and insurance bad-faith actions.

REPRESENTATIVE EXPERIENCE

- Defending the trustees of a private Ivy League university in connection with a complex international dispute relating to the historical ownership of ancient artifacts implicating unique issues of history, religion, regional conflict, and the highest levels of a prominent religious institution.
